

Editor's Note

The special issue of this journal consists of philosophical papers presented during the 44th Phavisminda International Conference held last May 27 – 29, 2022 at the Eastern Visayas State University, Tacloban City. The theme of the conference was “Edith Stein and Phenomenology.” The conference was graced with a keynote address from Rev. Dr. Jose Conrado A. Estafia who lectured on the topic entitled, “What is Phenomenology? Learning from Edith Stein.” It was further enhanced with 6 plenary lectures from philosophy enthusiasts in the country and abroad. The college of arts and sciences of this university spearheaded the hosting of this hybrid conference where most of the members of the Aradman Multidisciplinary Research Journal editorial team belong. The officers of the Philosophical Association of the Visayas and Mindanao gladly offered the editorial team of the journal some publishable papers presented during the conference. One of the papers was a plenary lecture, 2 won best paper award from separate categories, while others were runners-up. It was a distinct honor to have been given the opportunity to publish these papers. As a peer-reviewed journal, these papers still went through the rigors of blind review from experts in philosophy in the country.
